

FLORIDA KEYS NATIONAL MARINE SANCTUARY

Marine Sanitation Device Discharge Regulations

Effective: December 27, 2010

Activities prohibited Sanctuary-Wide:

- Discharge of sewage incidental to vessel use and generated by a marine sanitation device in accordance with the Federal Water Pollution Control Act.
- Having a marine sanitation device that is not secured in a manner that prevents discharges or deposits of treated and untreated sewage. Acceptable methods include, but are not limited to, all methods that have been approved by the U.S. Coast Guard.

Note: Vessel sewage discharge has been prohibited in state waters of the sanctuary since its designation as a No Discharge Zone by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in 2002. However, now all sanctuary waters – including both state and federal waters – are protected from potentially harmful vessel sewage discharge. Pump-out facilities are located throughout the Keys to assist boat operators in complying with this rule.
